CARS IDLE FOR IDLE NO MORE

A flag-carrying Idle No More protester watches as Winnipeg police divert traffic around a blockade set up at St. Charles Street and Portage Avenue Wednesday. The demonstration lasted three hours and forced traffic on the Trans-Canada Highway to be rerouted around the Perimeter Highway until 4 p.m. See story on page 2. SHANE GIBSON/METRO

What is the point of Idle No More?

The First Nations are restless. Organizers say the movement is about protecting all Canadians, not just aboriginals

BERNICE PONTANILLA
bernice.pontanilla@metronews.ca

While the Idle No More protests gain steam around the world, many Canadians still don't know what it's all about.

Dave Sauer, president of the Winnipeg Labour Council, said the issues being raised by the Idle No More protests, specifically the federal government's Bill C-45, affect all Canadians.

"As a trade unionist, we live and die by our ... agreements," said Sauer. "The treaties that we've made with the First Nations of this country ... those are not being followed through on."

Sauer said many of the non-aboriginal people at the Idle No More events are worried the federal government, led by Prime Minister Stephen Harper, isn't talking with Canadians and is changing the country through large omnibus bills that don't get enough debate before being passed into law.

"If you look at the changes to the Navigable Waters Act, we have a lot of river systems now, especially in Manitoba, that are no longer protected, that I know a lot of non-First Nations people use, whether it's for transportation or recreation," said Sauer, adding the Canadian Labour Congress has endorsed Idle No More.

"When aboriginal people do well, all of Canada does well," said Wab Kinew, director of indigenous inclusion at the University of Winnipeg, adding he hopes Idle No More becomes an awakening for young people to get educated on and engaged with "the policies and the programs that are going to determine their futures."

Quoted

"A lot of the things which other Canadian people prize, like the great outdoors, the rights and freedoms that we have, these are values that most of the people involved with Idle No More are focusing on."

Wab Kinew, director of indigenous inclusion at the University of Winnipeg

Meaningful dialogue

What they want

The organizers of Idle No More say protesters mostly want meaningful dialogue between politicians, First Nations and other Canadians.

They say things like the Conservative Government removing key environmental protection to the vast majority of waterways in Canada is a violation of their treaty rights and want them reversed.

Organizers also hope the Idle No More protests will spur Canadians to become more educated about treaty rights and galvanize youth of all races to action.

Movement stops traffic on Portage Avenue

Traffic on Canada's busiest highway had to be rerouted just west of Winnipeg Wednesday as Idle No More demonstrators blocked Portage Avenue.

"I'm doing this for my grandchildren and my great-grandchildren," explained Gerry Shingoose, 55, who lives in Winnipeg and was part of the crowd of roughly 50 that blocked the roadway. "When I was in residential schools, I felt like I didn't have a voice — this is finally giving me that voice."

The blockade started at 1 p.m. and Winnipeg police diverted traffic around the protest, including eastbound lanes of the Trans-Canada Highway.

Many drivers were not happy with the delay.

"I'm not quite sure what this is proving other than it's inconveniencing the average person," said Darryl Muir, who got stuck in a line of cars while trying to pick up his kids at an arena just west of the city. "How do I even get there from here?"

The protest was peaceful and traffic quickly returned to the roadway when protestors dispersed just before 4 p.m.

Increase. Councillor calls for more cops in school to build links with students

A Winnipeg councilor says she wants more police in schools — but not for the reasons many may think.

Coun. Paula Havixbeck told media she would like to see more officers participate in the School Resource Officers program, which sees police attend local schools for one or more days a week.

The officers are there to help deal with bullying, talk to kids and encourage them to stay in school. Many are also in schools to help kids overcome their fear or distrust of police.

Currently, 11 officers are taking part in the program, said Havixbeck, and she would like to see that increased to 15. Only two divisions have access to the officers, and she would like to see all divisions have access in the city.

It would cost the city about $1.5 million to add the additional officers, said Havixbeck. METRO

Shoe campaign aims to help poor

Caring. Act of giving shoes to barefoot man inspired activists to start campaign to help those in need get affordable housing

bernice.pontanilla@metronews.ca

An act of caring by a Winnipeg bus driver has inspired a coalition of groups to place shoes at the Manitoba Legislature in a bid to help people in poverty.

Make Poverty History Manitoba started taking pairs of the shoes to the legislature on Christmas Day as part of the Raise the Rental Allowance for people on Employment and Income Assistance (EIA) campaign.

Campaign spokesperson Kirsten Bernas said the shoes idea was inspired by Kris Doubledee, a Winnipeg Transit driver who gave his shoes to a barefoot man in the downtown area during a chilly day in September.

"The media really picked up on this and we all celebrated (his act of kindness)," said Bernas.

"But the question is: Why does this person not have shoes? ... We cannot rely on acts of charity alone."

The shoes campaign lasts 12 days, wrapping up on Saturday, but a noon-hour rally will be held on the front steps of the legislature on Friday.

Bernas said the 145 organizations that have signed on are calling on the provincial government to increase the rental allowance for people on EIA to 75 per cent of the median market rent. Right now, the rates are between 40 and 60 per cent, and haven't changed since 1992.

"A single person on basic assistance receives $285 for rent a month," she said, adding the cost to the government would be $18.5 million or less than one per cent of Manitoba's budget.

"I challenge anyone to find a place for $285 a month."

Government spokesperson Sally Housser said the province has not taken a "punitive approach," such as clawing back benefits, but would not commit to a housing allowance increase.

"Good, stable jobs are the best way out of poverty and off assistance," she wrote.

"That's why we're working with employers and community organizations to integrate our EIA and training programs to help more Manitobans build a better life for themselves."

Chris Christie speaks at a news conference at New Jersey's State House on Wednesday in Trenton, N.J. Congress to vote Friday on Superstorm Sandy aid

Rebuilding stage. Money from House votes could result in a roughly $60-billion relief package

The leader of the U.S. House agreed Wednesday to a vote this week on aid for Superstorm Sandy recovery, changing course after coming under intense pressure from angry fellow Republicans.

House Speaker John Boehner will schedule a vote Friday for $9 billion for the national flood insurance program and another on Jan. 15 for a remaining $51 billion in the package, Republican Rep. Peter King of New York said after emerging from a meeting with Boehner and Republican lawmakers from New York and New Jersey. The votes will be taken by the new Congress that will be sworn in Thursday.

Boehner's decision Tuesday night to cancel an expected vote on the storm aid before Congress ends its current session had provoked a firestorm of criticism from New York, New Jersey and adjacent states, including many lawmakers in his own party.

According to King, Boehner explained that after the contentious vote this week to avoid major tax increases and spending cuts called the "fiscal cliff," Boehner didn't think it was the right time to schedule the vote before the current Congress went out of business.

King left the session with Boehner without the anger that led him to lash out at the speaker Tuesday night.

"What's done is done. The end result will be New York, New Jersey and Connecticut will receive the funding they deserve. We made our position clear last night. That's in the past," King said.

Sandy was blamed for at least 120 deaths and battered coastline areas from North Carolina to Maine in October. New York, New Jersey and Connecticut were the hardest hit states and suffered high winds, flooding and storm surges.

On the table

The House Appropriations Committee has drafted a smaller, $27-billion measure for immediate recovery needs and a second amendment for $33 billion to meet longer-term needs.

- The $9 billion in flood insurance money to be voted on was originally in the $27-billion measure.
- The votes on Jan. 15 will be for $18 billion in immediate assistance and $33 billion for longer-term projects, including protection against future storms.

Mishandling debt could be 'catastrophic': Obama

U.S. stocks surged as traders around the globe felt renewed confidence over global markets after Congress reached a deal to avert the fiscal cliff. SPENCER PLATT/GETTY IMAGES

A last-minute deal in Congress to avoid the economy-shaking "fiscal cliff" sent world stocks climbing Wednesday, but doesn't solve the problem of the massive U.S. deficit, meaning other battles on deep spending cuts and the federal debt limit loom in the coming weeks and months.

All the major U.S. stock indexes jumped by at least two per cent, and the Dow Jones industrial average saw its biggest surge in six months.

A smiling President Barack Obama said he would sign the law "that raises taxes on the wealthiest two per cent of Americans while preventing tax hikes that could have sent the economy back into recession." Then he left for Hawaii to resume his holiday break.

Congress also will have to act as early as February on raising the $16.4-trillion federal borrowing limit, which will allow the country to pay its bills. The U.S. officially hit that debt limit Monday. "If Congress refuses to give the United States government the ability to pay these bills on time, the consequences for the entire global economy would be catastrophic — far worse than the impact of a fiscal cliff," Obama said.

Court battle. Sperm donor could be on the hook for child support payments

A sperm donor in the U.S. is fighting an effort to force him to pay child support for a child conceived through artificial insemination by a lesbian couple.

When 46-year-old William Marotta donated sperm to Angela Bauer and Jennifer Schreiner in 2009, Marotta relinquished all parental rights, including financial responsibility to the child. When Bauer and Schreiner filed for state assistance in Kansas this year, the state demanded the donor's name so it could collect child support for the now three-year-old girl.

The state contends the agreement between Marotta and the women is not valid because Kansas law requires a licensed physician to perform artificial insemination.

"If a sperm donor makes his contribution through a licensed physician and a child is conceived, the donor is held harmless under state statute. In cases where the parties do not go through a physician or a clinic, there remains the question of who actually is the father of a child or children," Angela de Rocha, a spokeswoman for the Kansas Department for Children and Families, said in a statement.

Bauer and Schreiner have said they fully support Marotta's efforts to fight the state's request. When Bauer was diagnosed in March with what she calls "a significant illness" that prevents her from working, Schreiner sought health insurance for their daughter from the state. The DCF told Schreiner if she didn't provide the sperm donor's name, it would deny any health benefits because she was withholding information.

Movie theatre shooting. Families of victims reject invitation to reopening

Relatives of the majority of people killed in a Colorado movie theatre rejected an invitation on Wednesday to attend its reopening this month, calling it a "disgusting offer" that came at a terrible time — right after the first Christmas without their loved ones.

The parents, grandparents, cousins and widow of nine of the 12 people killed said they were asked to attend an "evening of remembrance" followed by a movie when the Aurora theatre reopens on Jan. 17. They released a letter sent to the theatre's owner, Cinemark, in which they criticized the Texas-based company for not previously reaching out to them to offer condolences and refusing to meet with them without lawyers.

"Our family members will never be on this earth with us again and a movie ticket and some token words from people who didn't care enough to reach out to us ... is appalling," the letter said.

‘We have fiddled ... while Syria burns’: UN official

Syrian uprising. UN human rights chief estimates 60,000 people have died

The United Nations estimated Wednesday that more than 60,000 people have been killed in Syria’s 21-month-old uprising against authoritarian rule, a toll one-third higher than what anti-regime activists had counted. The UN human rights chief called the toll “truly shocking.”

Opposition activist groups had been estimating the death toll at more than 45,000 and this was the first time that the UN estimate was higher.

“Given there has been no let up in the conflict since the end of November, we can assume that more than 60,000 people have been killed by the beginning of 2013,” UN High Commissioner for Human Rights Navi Pillay said in a statement. “The number of casualties is much higher than we expected and is truly shocking,” she added.

“The failure of the international community, in particular the Security Council, to take concrete actions to stop the blood-letting, shames us all,” Pillay said. “Collectively, we have fiddled at the edges while Syria burns.”

The real death toll is likely to be even greater because reports containing incomplete information were excluded and a significant number of killings may not have been documented at all by the sources available.

“There are many names not on the list for people who were quietly shot in the woods,” Pillay’s spokesman Rupert Colville told The Associated Press.

The data, which didn’t distinguish among soldiers, rebels and civilians, also show that the killing in Syria has accelerated.

Deadly conflagration

The woman, Rajvinder Gill, went to Pakistan to try to settle a financial dispute but disappeared.

The lawyer, Aftab Bajwa, who represents the woman’s father, said the police chief of the eastern city of Lahore told a court Wednesday that a suspect confessed to killing the woman.

A police officer said the suspect confessed to working with a German of Pakistani origin who was involved in the dispute, and together they killed the woman.

The suspect said the second man has fled the country.

Police have not yet managed to locate the woman.

Newtown kids set to return to 'Sandy Hook'

Shooting survivors. School in neighbouring town has been renamed, renovated and garrisoned by a team of police officers

The children who escaped last month's shootings at a Connecticut elementary school will be returning to classes in a neighbouring town in a refurbished school now named after their old one, school officials said Wednesday.

Newtown Superintendent of Schools Janet Robinson announced that the students' new school, the former Chalk Hill Middle School in Monroe, has been renamed Sandy Hook Elementary School. She said the Sandy Hook staff made that decision.

"That's who they are. They're the Sandy Hook family," Robinson said after a news conference at a park in Monroe a few kilometres from the school, which will open for classes Thursday morning. An open house was held for parents and students on Wednesday.

The school where the shootings occurred remains closed and guarded by police. Newtown officials haven't decided yet on the building's future.

It's been nearly three weeks since the Dec. 14 massacre, when gunman Adam Lanza killed 20 students and six educators. Lanza also killed his mother at the home they shared in Newtown before the school shootings, which ended when Lanza fatally shot himself as police arrived.

Police haven't released any details about a motive.

Numerous police officers on Wednesday guarded the outside of the Monroe school, and told reporters to stay away. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Owner of lost lobsters and gifts tracked down

Stacey Nash's Christmas vacation involved missing lobsters, the police and one thoughtful bus driver.

"This will be a story we'll never forget," Nash said.

On Wednesday morning, Halifax Regional Police issued a release asking for the public's help in finding the owner of a suitcase filled with frozen lobsters and Christmas gifts.

A Metro Transit driver had turned it into police before noon after spotting it on Monday.

"Given the nature of the items, whoever owned it was not local," police spokesman Const. Pierre Bourdages said. "It paid off to alert the public."

Thanks to a tip from someone who read the release and saw a Kijiji ad by Nash's sister-in-law about the missing suitcase, police called her in Toronto less than an hour later.

Nash said she was "just so happy" everything was safe.

"I never eat seafood here in Toronto," said Nash, who is originally from Shelburne, N.S. "It's just not the same."

The suitcase was lost at about 6 a.m. on Monday when Nash's brother drove her to the airport to catch a flight back to Ontario, after her first holiday visit to Halifax in 20 years.

"He said, 'Stacey, you're going to have to do without your lobster,'" Nash said when he saw the back of the truck was open.

When she realized the luggage was gone — along with a Wii, clothing and Christmas gifts besides the three large lobsters — Nash said she was upset, but had to board the plane.

Stacey's sister-in-law, Krista Nash, picked up the suitcase on Wednesday afternoon from police and is making plans with Nash on how to ship the luggage to Toronto. HALEY RYAN/METRO IN HALIFAX

Canadian newborns — you could have it better in eight other nations

Canada pulls in at No. 9 in The Economist's ranking of the best places to be born in 2013.

It's a slight slip from the fifth place Canada held in the magazine's slightly more whimsical 1988 list.

A quarter-century ago, The Economist gave Canada maximum bonus points for scenery and "having the most desirable passport," as well as good marks for lack of cultural poverty. Canada got a predictably low score on the yawn index in 1988.

This time, the magazine said, its scores have turned "deadly serious." Rankings are calculated through a mix of wealth, crime rate, trust in public institutions and the health of family life.

Quality of family life is based primarily on divorce rates, said Laza Kekic of the Economist Intelligence Unit. Job security is calculated by unemployment rates and gender equality by the number of seats in parliament held by women.

The U.S. plunged to 16th from first in 1988, since it could no longer capitalize on The Economist's generous points for culture and not being boring. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Time to empty the piggy bank.
Penny collection starts Feb. 4

Jim Flaherty is setting his sights on your pennies. The federal finance minister is reminding Canadians that starting Feb. 4, the Royal Canadian Mint will stop distributing pennies and instead start collecting them from banks and other financial institutions.

Flaherty says he'll take every advantage over the next month to remind Canadians that the supply of pennies will start to diminish as a result.

In his March budget, Flaherty unexpectedly announced the demise of the one-cent piece, saying pennies cost too much to manufacture and are a nuisance to many Canadians.

After Feb. 4, cash transactions will have to be rounded to the nearest five-cent increment, but electronic transactions will still be calculated down to the individual cent.

A cabinet order last month gave Flaherty the authority to pay financial institutions for the mountains of pennies they'll begin to return to the mint. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Costly coinage

- The last pennies minted on May 4 in Winnipeg cost about 1.6 cents each to manufacture.
- Even though Finance Canada faces a one-time net cost of $38 million to retire the penny, the long-term savings to government and to the economy will be substantial.

Chump change: Are nickels next on chopping block?

Coins we don't love anymore. Some say five-cent piece is also becoming obsolete, and should follow penny into the sunset

The federal government is retiring the penny, and some think the nickel should be next in line. THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

As the penny is set to begin retirement next month, there are already calls to put the nickel out to pasture as well.

The Royal Canadian Mint starts collecting one-cent coins on Feb. 4 for melting and recycling of the metal content, with some six billion pennies expected to be surrendered by Canadians over the next six years.

Finance Minister Jim Flaherty announced the surprise demise in last year's budget, saying the penny had become a nuisance.

And a former Bank of Canada economist says the nickel is also becoming obsolete, and should be next in line for retirement.

"We see less and less people now ... digging in their wallets for nickels," Jean-Pierre Aubry said in an interview.

A retired 30-year veteran of the Bank of Canada, Aubry has been a leading proponent of withdrawing the one-cent piece from circulation.

In papers and presentations for Desjardins Group over the last few years, Aubry used economic models to show that the penny should actually have been killed in about 1982.

That was a tipping point, as more Canadians hoarded the coins and the Royal Canadian Mint was pressed to churn out billions more to keep retailers stocked, costing the government up to $11 million annually.

Aubry argues the nickel will soon hit the same tipping point the penny did in 1982, as Canadians hoard them in greater numbers, forcing the mint to distribute up to 350 million each year to meet retail demand. "It's a sign that the coin is not well used," he said.

LEAVING HIS SINGLE-DUDE WAYS IN THE DUST

HE SAYS...
John Mazerolle
metronews.ca/voices/he-says

Year after year I make tough New Year's resolutions in an attempt to mend my bachelorhood ways, such as resolving to regularly dust the TV with a cloth, rather than running my hand over the screen every six months and exclaiming, "Wow, that's dusty!"

Well, I'm happy to say that in the past year I've finally made some progress. I no longer own a television.

In your face, dust. Cough, cough.

And in the kitchen, a friend of mine brought me 12 basic spices this year and, I must say, they really spruce up the windowsill.

Many of my other single-dude problems remain, however. I just don't have the right attitude.

Share and share alike

I consider a keyboard sticky with the previous user's Snickers bar a tasty value-add, similar to a mint on your pillow.

I notice this in newsrooms where different shifts share the same computers. Some of my co-workers start their shifts with spray and cloths and hand sanitizer, as if they'll be using their desks for open-heart surgery. Meanwhile, I consider a keyboard sticky with the previous user's Snickers bar a tasty value-add, similar to a mint on your pillow.

This failure as a human being is unfortunate from a life perspective but very fortunate from a column perspective because it leads to:

John's 2013 Bachelorhood Resolutions

- I resolve to clean the four breakfast bowls I have, rather than using increasingly less appropriate stand-ins such as Tupperware, popcorn bowls, flower pots and the mop bucket.
- I will clean these dishes before Corn Flakes have become irremovable fossils that will be of interest to top Corn Flake scientists seven centuries from now.
- I resolve to cook a meal that is not bacon, eggs and toast. (Making bacon and toast, eggs and toast, or bacon and eggs is partial credit only.)
- I resolve to accept that re-soaking the dishes repeatedly will not get them clean, that rotating the pillows only works once, and that not using the coffee machine for a while is not the same as cleaning the coffee machine.
- I resolve to invite people over so that I have to clean, but I'm still not scrubbing behind the toilet unless it's, at minimum, the Queen.
- I resolve to learn how to do things on my own rather than calling my parents with cryptic questions like, "Say there was a grease fire right now, would pouring baking soda on it help? Because I don't have any, hypothetically."
- I resolve to do these things soon enough that they can be considered New Year's resolutions and not some last-ditch bucket list. Because the bucket has corn flakes in it.

Royal resolve: Tackling a job even a prince like William can handle.

Two worlds collide

Sci-fi classic gets stamp series

This image, released by Britain's Royal Mail on Wednesday, shows a postage stamp with an image of Doctor Who star Matt Smith. The Doctor — who usually uses a police box for travel — will be zooming through time and space on the edge of letters in 2013.

The stamps honouring the cult British television program will be available starting at the end of March. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Royal Mail is marking the 50th anniversary of the science fiction show Doctor Who with a series of stamps featuring each of the 11 actors who have played the title role. Those featured include the present Doctor, Matt Smith, as well as past Time Lords such as David Tennant and Christopher Eccleston. The stamp featuring the first Doctor, William Hartnett, is shown below.

Collective bands together to pay tribute to Wheels

Songs in the Key of Hope. Winnipeg musicians put their tunes behind project to raise money in memory of Degrassi star Neil Hope

BACKSTAGE PASS
Jared Story
winnipeg@metronews.ca

Everybody wants something. For No Label Collective, a group of Winnipeg musicians, that something was paying tribute to Degrassi actor Neil Hope and his iconic character Derek "Wheels" Wheeler.

Songs in the Key of Hope: The Derek Wheeler Story features 19 original songs by Winnipeg artists, all inspired by Hope/Wheels.

Hope died in 2007 in a Hamilton rooming house at age 35, a fact that went unreported — and even unnoticed by family and friends — until February of last year. Soon after receiving the shocking news, No Label's tribute album idea was born.

"When you're hanging out with people the first thing you ever do is you talk about your likes. For every single one of us (in No Label), that touchstone is Degrassi," No Label member and album project manager Nick Friesen says.

Songs in the Key of Hope features songs by such No Label acts as Merch Table Delite (Friesen's band), JohNNy SiZZle, Brian James and the Tigers, Kato Destroy and Hey Pilgrim as well as non-No Label artists like Vav Jungle, Sons of York and The Eardrums.

"All the songs are within the vein of Degrassi, either inspired by Wheels or directly about Wheels and his experiences," Friesen says. "The Hey Pilgrim song is about the vacuum salesman incident, when Wheels was hitchhiking and he gets picked up by the vacuum salesman (and subsequently molested). That was f—d up."

All proceeds from the sale of Songs in the Key of Hope — which is available at Music Trader and Into the Music, and digitally at nolabelcollective.bandcamp.com — will go to the Canadian Diabetes Association. Hope was diagnosed with type 1 diabetes in his early 20s, but reportedly had trouble keeping up with his insulin injections due to alcoholism, depression and poverty.

Album release

No Label will officially release the album tomorrow at the Windsor Hotel with performances by Merch Table Delite, Thrift Store Love, Vav Jungle, Ex Modern Teen, Kato Destroy and Dust Adam Dust. Admission is $10 at the door, which also gets you a digital copy of the album. Showtime is 9 p.m.

Walking the line of super and natural

Sci-Fi television. Kris Holden-Ried speaks to Metro about working on Showcase's Lost Girl and the physical challenges it presents as an actor

STEPHEN ERAMO
scene@metronews.ca

Having a "wolf in the fold" is usually considered a bad thing, but if that wolf happens to be Lost Girl's Dyson, then you are in luck. Handsome, intelligent and brimming with animal magnetism — no pun intended — he is a member of the supernatural Fae community and works as a police homicide detective to help keep the peace amongst humans as well as the Fae.

For actor Kris Holden-Ried, who plays Dyson on the popular Showcase TV series, teetering between both worlds is a constant but welcome acting exercise.

"The physical challenges with Dyson are, one, he's a shape-shifter, so he has to have animalism, and two, he's of indiscriminate age, so we're playing him as 1,000 or so years old," notes Holden-Ried during a break on Lost Girl's Toronto set. "The trick is to then mix and match that with creating a grounded and believable character."

Dyson's unofficial crime-busting ally (and romantic interest) is Lost Girl's heroine and fellow Fae, Bo (Anna Silk), a beautiful Succubus able to suck the life out of you.

"In season one, Bo and Dyson shared a great deal of passion, but he also knew some of Bo's secrets," says Holden-Ried. "While that put him at an advantage, it also stopped him from fully committing to her. Dyson ultimately fell in love with Bo, but couldn't show it, which was fun to play.

"At the end of season one, Dyson's love for Bo was ripped from his soul. That turned into a whole other journey for him in season two, where the constant emptiness he felt almost drove him crazy."

Far from Lost

Lost Girl premieres Jan. 6 on Showcase

- Upcoming. While the actor cannot reveal what awaits Lost Girl fans in the show's upcoming third season, it is obvious just by watching Holden-Ried at work that his enthusiasm for the series and playing Dyson has not waned in the least.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

A year in music: Top 5 chart toppers of 2012

Music. From Gangnam Style to Call Me Maybe, Metro looks back at some of the year's biggest hits

Father John Misty made 2012's Top 5 with Fear Fun. CONTRIBUTED/MAXIMILLA LUKACS

Top 5 albums/singles

1. Frank Ocean's Channel Orange
2. TIE: Father John Misty's Fear Fun and PSY's Gangnam Style
3. Carly Rae Jepsen's Call Me Maybe
4. Gotye's Somebody That I Used to Know
5. TIE: Rihanna's Diamonds and Ke$ha's Warrior

How did we all leave We Are Young by Fun. off this list? Is it because we're all too old to sing that song out loud? Or is it that the opening of the song is just too schlocky to make it all worth the amazing chorus? Seriously, if that song was the chorus alone, it would be the song of the year. To tell you the truth, it probably still will be anyway. Also, here's where I'm a little bit of a jerk: That Gotye song officially started getting airplay last year. PAT HEALY

Somebody That I Used to Know stays on the list because it made me think there was this really great Police song from the '80s recently discovered and newly released. I think I just proved your old fogies theory. AMBER RAY

Maybe this supports the argument that I'm already an old fogey, but I had to look up the Rihanna and Ke$ha songs because I hadn't heard them before. Ke$ha has finally been the first to inspire me to call something "devil music" in an unflattering way. HEIDI PATALANO

Another bit of food for thought: Would Gangnam Style make the list if there weren't a video? People probably posed the same question about Duran Duran in 1982, and it's strange how this bit of devil's advocacy is still relevant in 2012. But seriously, in an age where music videos aren't shown on regular TV anymore, it is interesting that a video made such a huge cultural and musical splash. PAT HEALY

I think it would have — hell, I still haven't even seen the Gangnam Style video, but I somehow know the dance. I personally enjoyed Britney trying her hand (at) it while appearing on Ellen, but why was she dressed like a flight attendant for that episode? MEREDITH ENG

I think a prerequisite for best song of the year means we can sing along with it. Oh man, I'm such a xenophobe. DOROTHY ROBINSON

What about Kanye this year? Did anybody vote for Cruel Summer? PAT HEALY

I say this every single year, and I hate change so I'll say it again: I have never heard anything by Kanye West that I didn't want to turn off immediately. Who's old and grumpy? This girl — this girl right here. MONICA WEYMOUTH

Oh man, Monica, give Mercy a chance! There's so much going on in this track. I love how it flawlessly switches between winding dancehall to some gritty southern rap all while maintaining a cool, dark undertone and then suddenly taking a left turn to an electronic dance party. Yup, you have to bring ALL your moves to the floor. Adding to the awesomeness is the all-black ninja-Bedouin looks everyone sports in the stylized video. It's totally one of those fashion moments I can see being referenced years from now. TINA CHADHA

Editor's picks

Music editor Pat Healy's Top 5

1. Father John Misty's Fear Fun
2. Michael Kiwanuka's Home Again
3. Big Boi's Vicious Lies and Dangerous Rumors
4. Frank Ocean's Channel Orange
5. TIE: Bruce Springsteen's Wrecking Ball and The Walkmen's Heaven

This was a weird year for music. For the first time, I feel like there was actually too much to listen to. Look at the top lists of any major publication and there are very few similarities.

I, for one, am surprised more outlets aren't praising the stellar songcraft of Father John Misty and Michael Kiwanuka. Neither are reinventing the wheel. In fact, both seem very much rooted in sounds of the '60s and '70s.

But as for my next two entries, Big Boi and Frank Ocean, I think both are really doing great things to push their genres forward.

Big Boi took a brave tact on this most recent album, which also didn't make many lists (presumably due to its December release date). Instead of just a few indie collaborations here and there, like he has done in the past, almost every track is a collaboration with either Phantogram or Little Dragon. The results are completely original.

Frank Ocean's results are completely original too. It really is like he is on the forefront of bringing a much-needed update to R&B. The new school, which includes Miguel and The Weeknd, never knew a world where hip-hop didn't exist and that has formed their worldview in such a unique way that the old soulsters didn't have.

And in fifth place, maybe it's just loyalty, but two of my favourite acts released albums that weren't my favourites they've ever released, but I still enjoy them.

2012's memorable moments à la mode

Beauty and the buzz. From a dress double-up to a cropped-coiffe craze, here are some of the most talked-about style stories of 2012

The Olympics saw some of the most famous faces in fashion strutting to a David Bowie soundtrack. GETTY IMAGES

Michelle Obama and Ann Romney's matching hues.
The wives of the presidential candidates turned out to the second debate between Barack Obama and Mitt Romney in practically the same shade of hot pink. But they weren't by the same designer: Romney's was by Oscar de la Renta, and Obama's by Michael Kors. A potential matching prom dress-style embarrassment was chalked up to timing: October's breast cancer awareness month.

Marc Jacobs' Louis Vuitton show
Many of the designer runways seemed more of the same —stark stages, thumping music and audiences distracted by their electronic gadgets — but the Louis Vuitton fall catwalk in Paris commanded attention. Models dressed in their very best travelling clothes stepped off a reconstructed retro steam train. Valets carried the vintage-inspired hat boxes and vanity cases. The trip seemed refreshingly refined and modern.

Two-tone Stella McCartney dresses
McCartney, no stranger to the red carpet, has created a style that celebrities can't get enough of. Her ultra-flattering "silhouette" dress has become almost ubiquitous. It features one colour on the bodice and back, and a graphic opposite on the sides and sleeves. Kate Winslet has worn several versions, and Brooklyn Decker, Kate Moss, Edie Falco and Liv Tyler have, too. The best turn might have been Jane Fonda at the Cannes Film Festival.

Beyoncé's back-from-baby body
Some new mothers claim they feel sexier than ever. Beyoncé was living proof at the Met Gala, the important industry event co-hosted by Vogue's Anna Wintour. Beyoncé's skin-tight, largely sheer — save the bodice beading and feathered fish-tail train — gown by Givenchy announced that Ivy Blue Carter's mom wasn't going to hold back. An honourable mention goes to Jessica Simpson, who dieted her way to a Weight Watchers ad, then wound up pregnant again.

Supermodel reunion at the London Olympics.
Gold was the new black at the closing ceremony with a parade of supermodels wearing gilded gowns in a tribute to British fashion. Kate Moss and Naomi Campbell both had on Alexander McQueen, Georgia May Jagger's was by Victoria Beckham, Karen Elson was in Burberry, and Stella Tennant donned a Christopher Kane Swarovski-crystal catsuit.

Miley Cyrus' cropped cut
When Cyrus cut off the long hair her fans had become used to, she took some heat. She has said (and tweeted) repeatedly, though, that she was pleased with the new punk-pixie look and was sticking with it. Short hair turned out to be a big trend, with Alicia Keys, Rihanna and Anne Hathaway all ending the year with much shorter locks than they started with. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

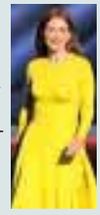
Moore at the Emmys



Julianne Moore's neon-yellow Dior Haute Couture outfit (really a sweater and ball skirt) spawned a love-it-or-hate-it debate among armchair style critics. What was largely left out of that conversation, however, was that it was Raf Simons' big celebrity debut for Dior.

007's slim suits

Daniel Craig's wardrobe in Skyfall is impeccably tailored — and quite tight. Unlike the James Bonds that came before him, Craig, whose wardrobe is created mostly by Tom Ford, takes his suits Euro-style with tapered legs and shorter rises.

Angelina Jolie at the Oscars

The leg that peeked out of the high thigh-high slit of her Versace gown was the most exciting appearance on the red carpet. It was Jolie's picture-perfect pose to expose just enough thigh that launched a thousand memes.

This salad has nutrition galore and makes a great side salad or buffet dish. Often I'll add some grilled chicken or fish and make it a main meal. Cut the avocado just before serving, or add some lemon juice to it to prevent discolouration.

1. Steam the green beans just until bright green and still crisp, about 3 minutes. Place immediately under cold water and rinse until the beans are no longer warm. Place in a serving bowl.

2. Spray small non-stick skillet with cooking oil and place over medium heat. Sauté corn, stirring frequently, until browned, approximately 8 minutes. Add to the serving bowl, along with the black beans, chickpeas, bell pepper, onion and avocado.

3. Whisk the zest, juice, oil, garlic, ginger, jalapeño, salt and pepper together in a small bowl.

4. Pour the dressing over the salad and toss to mix well. Garnish with the cilantro. ROSE REISMAN'S COMPLETE LIGHT KITCHEN (WHITECAP BOOKS) BY ROSE REISMAN

Lighten it up with eggs

The beauty of poached eggs is their versatility. Depending on what you pair them with, they can be breakfast, lunch or even dinner.

So for this quick and easy weekday meal, serve them with a bed of arugula, a scoop of ricotta cheese — one of the most overlooked cheeses in the dairy case (it's good for more than just lasagna and stuffed shells!) — and a bit of buttered multigrain toast. It's simple. It's filling. And it could be breakfast, lunch or dinner.

Want it to be a bit more robust? Just about any cooked and cooled vegetables could be added to the arugula. Leftover roasted winter vegetables, such as butternut squash or carrots, would be great.

1. Divide the arugula between 4 serving bowls.

2. In a medium bowl, mix together the ricotta and lemon zest. Season with salt and black pepper. Divide between the serving bowls, spooning it over the arugula. Set aside. Bring a large saucepan of water to a low simmer. Add the vinegar.

3. Crack each egg into a small heatproof glass. One at a time, gently and slowly pour each egg into the simmering water, bringing the lip of the glass right down to the water so that the egg slides in. Depending on the size of your pan, you may need to cook them in 2 batches.

4. Cook for 4 minutes, then use a slotted spoon to lift each egg out (letting excess water drip away). Nestle one egg into the ricotta in each serving bowl.

5. Season the eggs with salt and pepper, then drizzle with truffle oil and sprinkle with chives. Serve with the toast. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Resolutions from a decorator

DESIGN CENTRE
Karl Lohnes
home@metronews.ca

Every new year the decorating magazines, newspaper columns and home decor television shows ramble off the predicted trends for the upcoming new year.

Although it's good to know what they are, it's also important to consider which ones can — and cannot — be implemented in our lives.

My resolution this year is not to bring a lot of new trends into my life, but to say goodbye to a few that don't hold longevity in my home.

Here are two of last year's trends that I fell prey to in 2011-2012 — ones that have had their way (and their day) with me.

The colour brown has been used to create some pretty spectacular rooms, but it's time to say goodbye this year. SUPPLIED

The colour brown

We've seen brown tones dominate home decor for the past 10 years, and although it wasn't a new trend last year, it just seemed to linger on much longer than other colour trends from the past.

From espresso wood tones to deep brown leather furnishings, it's a promise to myself to think twice before introducing any more of it to my room's decor scheme. There are certain decor items that will always need to be brown — wood flooring, cabinetry and book cases, but using it in upholstery, paint and wallpaper feels a bit overdone these days.

Replace those dark brown colours with rich, muted shades of grey, purple, teal and cinnamon.

The deconstructed factory look

Stripped metal furnishings, repurposed wood, worn carpets and industrial factory cart coffee tables have somewhat had their day.

There's always a casual decor scheme on tap and the industrial chic look is now overblown. Was it an attempt to decorate in a more casual manner without going back to country decorating? My new motto about this look: If it looked great in a factory setting, then don't bring it home anymore.

Search for fresher looks in the casual decor schemes — pastel colours, pale wicker, seagrass and off-white paint colours.

Industrial Chic: Used initially for a little shock value, industrial items have now become overblown in the home. SUPPLIED

Emerald named Pantone's colour of 2013

Emerald is the jewel in Pantone's crown of colours for 2013. The vibrant green hue was announced as its colour of the year.

Emerald is symbolic of growth, renewal and regeneration, said Leatrice Eiseman, executive director of the Pantone Color Institute, the research division of Pantone Inc., which creates colour standards for the fashion, beauty and home industries.

"That is what the stone implies and has ... for many cultures. It celebrates new life, and that, we feel, is a good message because it speaks of optimism for the future," she said in a phone interview from Bainbridge Island, Wash.

"At the same time, because it is closely connected to the gemstone, more people would think of it as a colour that is very sophisticated."

The selection of the rich green hue — which Eiseman describes as a "well-balanced colour" — is a striking departure from Tangerine Tango, the reddish-orange shade that took Pantone's top colour honour for 2012.

Pantone's annual colour forecast of the hottest hue for the year ahead factors in a number of different influences, from graphic design and fashion to film and TV.

Eiseman said they also look at the consumer zeitgeist from an international perspective, and start to seek out a colour symbolic of what people feel they need.

They are also on the lookout for a "building up of references" in the years leading up to the hue in question being named the top colour, she added.

With that checklist in tow, emerald — and its seemingly universal appeal among style arbiters and consumers — appears to fit the bill.

"We had to look for a specific green that was not one that we were seeing as much of, but as I said, was on the ascendancy," said Eiseman.

Indeed, the vibrant shade has been a fashionable favourite for some time, from the sleeved, sequined Versace number worn by Angelina Jolie at the 2011 Golden Globes to the sleek, silk Mulberry dress donned recently by the Duchess of Cambridge.

But Eiseman noted that emerald greens are surfacing in cosmetics as well, notably in the proliferation of colours emerging in nail polishes.

Eiseman said emerald is already being seen colouring kitchen appliances, and consumers can expect to see bedding and dishware among the array of items steeped in the shade in the months to come.

"Certainly in domestics and linens, table tops, glassware, ceramics (is) where emerald really shines," she said. "If you do emerald in glassware, it is just spectacular. It also takes on such beautiful colourations.

"These are the ways you're going to be seeing it, and in a lot of high-tech kind of applications as well going forward," she added. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Colour me emerald

"If you look into emerald ... from a very traditional, historical perspective — and this is something that's shared by many cultures — it comes from the most abundant colour family in nature. There are more greens than there are any other colours."

Clean and colourful dresser drawers

You can get a similar effect from contact paper, which comes in a wide variety of colours and patterns. But you can make your own if you're looking for a different look.

Materials

- Foam craft brushes
- Mod Podge matte finish
- Six sheets of patterned, heavy-duty wrapping paper (or swatches of colourful wallpaper or fabric)

Step 1
Wipe the insides of the drawers with a moist rag. If they're musty, wipe them with mineral spirits or Murphy's Oil Soap and let them air dry in the sun.
Step 2
After selecting six sheets of wrapping paper (or however many drawers you have), cut the sheets down to the size of the drawers. If all the drawers are the same size, use the first rectangle as a template.
Step 3
Apply a thin, even coat of Mod Podge adhesive to the bottom of the first drawer. Mod Podge is 100 per cent water-based, so it won't stink up baby's clothes.
Step 4
Glue the cut-to-size paper rectangle to the bottom of the drawer by pressing it along the centre and out towards the corners to eliminate bubbles or wrinkling. Repeat steps 3 and 4 for all drawers.
Step 5
Give the drawers four hours to dry, then apply a thin top coat of Mod Podge over the paper to protect against wear and tear. Let everything dry overnight and you're left with fresh, durably lined drawers that provide a little dose of happy every time they're opened.

Pretty as a picture frame mobile

Materials

- Printed papers or fabrics
- Small frames
- One larger frame
- About three yards of ribbon, divided into four uneven sections
- Decorative paper
- Photos or art reduced to fit small frames
- Four screw eyes
- Fishing line or thin wire
- Glue stick
- Paint
- Polyurethane

Step 1
Paint the frames to make them colourful. Some may need a light sanding first. Add a coat of polyurethane after the paint is dry.
Step 2
If any of your frames has a support arm on the back to prop it up, pull it off. You want the back of the mini frame to be completely smooth.
Step 3
Put your photos or artwork in the small frames. (You could use abstract art, photos of vintage trucks or pictures of baby's cousins, for instance.)
Step 4
To connect two small frames vertically, run the ribbon behind the artwork but inside the frame back. Cut a piece of decorative paper the same size as each frame back and, with a glue stick, paste it on.
Step 5
Remove the glass and backing from the large frame. Hang the four pairs of small frames from the large frame by twisting four screw eyes into the back of the large frame and then tying a ribbon to each screw eye.
Step 6
Tie a length of fishing line or thin wire to each screw eye, then tie all four pieces together so the mobile hangs evenly. Knot the end for attaching to a ceiling hook.

Fabric mirror

Materials

- Fabric scraps
- Fabric stiffener
- aluminum foil
- Craft store mirror
- Cardboard
- String
- Super glue

Step 1
When you design a space for a little one, chances are you'll end up with leftover fabric. This project is a great way to use up those scraps. Lay the fabric on pieces of aluminum foil. Brush fabric stiffener onto the material and smooth out bubbles or wrinkles. Let dry completely, then peel off the foil.
Step 2
Sketch a lion or other animal onto a piece of paper and cut it out. Trace the shapes onto the back of the stiffened fabric. Cut out fabric shapes. The fabric stiffener will prevent the edges from unraveling.
Step 3
Cut a small scrap of cardboard smaller than the mirror. Punch two holes and tie a string through them. Glue the cardboard onto the back of the mirror. This will allow you to hang the fabric mirror when it's finished.
Step 4
Cut a large circle inside the lion's mane (or the face of your animal). Line up the mirror in the hole and glue it to the back of the fabric so the edges are hidden. Let everything dry completely, then hang.

Rays, Price come to 1-year agreement

The Tampa Bay Rays and American League Cy Young Award winner David Price have agreed to a one-year deal for just over $10 million and avoided arbitration.

Price, who earned $4.35 million in 2012, agreed to the $10.1125-million deal Tuesday. The Rays announced it on Wednesday.

He became the franchise's first 20-game winner in 2012, going 20-5 with an AL-best 2.56 ERA and 205 strikeouts in 211 innings. Price narrowly beat out Detroit's Justin Verlander for the honour that annually goes to the league's top pitcher.

Nugent-Hopkins a source of insight for Team Canada teammates with big-league aspirations

Team Canada captain Ryan Nugent-Hopkins looks up ice during practice on Wednesday in Ufa, Russia. NATHAN DENETTE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Regardless of what happens the rest of the way for Team Canada at the world junior hockey championship, most of the players on the team hope — one day — to make the NHL.

"It's in the back of your mind all the time," said forward Boone Jenner, a draft pick of the Columbus Blue Jackets. "It's the main goal. Since you're a little kid you want to play in the NHL. Every day you try to think about that and wonder how you're going to get better each day and keep going. It's the ultimate goal.

"And hopefully some day I'll be able to set foot on the ice for a game."

While his teammates can only dream of life in the NHL, captain Ryan Nugent-Hopkins has already lived it. He was a point-per-game player with the Edmonton Oilers last year, and a rising star in the league.

As such, Nugent-Hopkins has become a wonderful resource for his teammates to learn about life in the bigs.

"They definitely have a lot of questions," said Nugent-Hopkins. "Some guys have experienced a few games. Some guys will be there in a few seasons. There definitely are some questions and I try to shed light on it."

What does he tell them?

"It's definitely the best of everything," said Nugent-Hopkins. "The checking is so much better, the speed of the game is just amazing. The first thing I noticed was the atmosphere in the buildings. It was extremely fun to play in, playing against the best players in the world, players I've always watched, was pretty cool."

As much as Nugent-Hopkins has been the focus of the team's offence on the ice, he is the focus of attention off it for the advice he can give.

"He's been talking to us a little bit about it," said Jenner. "Little stories. Everyone listens in.... He's already been up there. It's kind of cool."

Defenceman Scott Harrington — drafted by the Pittsburgh Penguins — pays rapt attention when Nugent-Hopkins talks.

"He's been great for us," said Harrington. "He brings so much experience and leadership. He told us what it's like. It sounds awesome. It's motivation for the rest of us to get to where he is."

In all, 20 of Team Canada's 23 players are already drafted by NHL clubs. As many as 10 could get the call to come to camp immediately after the tournament if the lockout ends.

They'll have pulled off a rare double: Getting to play in the world juniors, then getting an immediate shot at the NHL.

"It's definitely pretty exciting to think about it that way," said Kitchener Rangers defenceman Ryan Murphy, a lock to go to the Carolina Hurricanes' camp. "I never really thought about it, but that could have been my last game in Kitchener I played before the break.

"It would be nice to play another game in Kitchener, but it would be pretty cool to play in the NHL. Whatever happens, I'll be happy with it."

NHLers temper excitement for return to ice

Former Canadiens players Mathieu Darche, left, and Steve Begin arrive for a September training session in Brossard, Que. Begin is cautiously optimistic a deal to end the lockout is coming soon. GRAHAM HUGHES/THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

The talks have heated up and a deal could soon be at hand, but NHL players are trying not to let their hopes get too high that a collective-bargaining agreement will get signed and a partial season will be saved.

A group of eight NHL players skating in Candiac, Que., a suburb of Montreal, Wednesday were glad that their players' union and the league have been talking over the last few days in New York. But they caution that the NHLPA thought a deal was close only a month ago, only to see commissioner Gary Bettman withdraw his offer.

"Yes, we're excited, but I hope it's not like last time when we were all excited and then the next thing you know, it's off the table," said forward Steve Begin. "But you have to stay positive."

"Now I think it's time ... I think they'll get something done."

Locked-out defenceman Steve Begin

Begin does not have a contract, but is awaiting a chance to crack the Calgary Flames' roster during what may be a short training camp.

The league wants a deal done by Jan. 11, so a 48-game schedule can start on Jan. 19. The threat of losing an entire season, as happened in 2004-05, looks to have lit a fire under the negotiations.

"I've got excited before and I'm not going to get excited until a deal is signed," cautioned Montreal Canadiens captain Brian Gionta.

"We're looking forward because it's getting late," said Canucks forward Alex Burrows. "We're in the new year now, so we have to make sure they keep talking and find a way to grind it out and agree on a few things." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Buono knew QB would be real McCoy as coach

Job interviews. Mike McCoy, former CFL pivot, is meeting Buffalo, Chicago, Arizona and Philadelphia about head coaching positions

Mike McCoy's one of the NFL's hottest head-coaching prospects, but Wally Buono knew 13 years ago while with the Calgary Stampeders that the Broncos' offensive co-ordinator had the qualities to be a good football coach.

"Oh yeah and here's why," the B.C. Lions vice-president of football operations and GM said Wednesday. "We had Mike for something like four days and then he started for us and won four or five games with no training camp and a lot of it was because he cerebrally was able to pick up things quickly and stay within the structure of the offence.

"He had all the things as a coach you need to have: You have to have a work ethic, you have to have discipline, you have to have toughness. Things didn't faze him."

Buono was Calgary's head coach in 1999 when McCoy arrived and quickly found himself under centre with injuries to regulars Dave Dickenson and Henry Burris. McCoy adjusted quickly, completing 117 of 183 passes (63.9 per cent) for 1,669 yards with 10 TDs and just two interceptions.

At season's end, Buono wanted McCoy to return but the then 28-year-old quarterback abruptly retired to become an offensive assistant coach with the NFL's Carolina Panthers.

Completing his fourth season as Denver's offensive co-ordinator, McCoy should be relishing an off week after the Broncos (13-3) earned a first-round playoff bye. Instead, he'll meet with the Buffalo Bills, Chicago Bears, Arizona Cardinals and Philadelphia Eagles about their head-coaching vacancies.

McCoy, 40, has shown a deft touch when it comes to designing successful offences, having helped Denver reach the playoffs the last two years with vastly different quarterbacks.

In 2011, Denver (8-8) topped the NFL in rushing and beat Pittsburgh in the playoffs with Tim Tebow, the former Heisman Trophy winner who has been criticized for his flawed passing mechanics. This season, the Broncos (13-3) were ranked second overall in scoring with Peyton Manning, a future hall of famer and one of the top passers in league history. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Linebacker Lewis ready to retire

Ray Lewis spent 17 seasons instilling fear in his opponents while serving as an inspirational leader for the Baltimore Ravens.

Now he's poised and eager to become a full-time dad.

Lewis announced Wednesday he will end his brilliant NFL career after the Ravens complete their 2013 playoff run.

Lewis has been sidelined since Oct. 14 with a torn right triceps. The 13-time Pro Bowl middle linebacker intends to face the Indianapolis Colts Sunday in what will almost certainly be his final home game.

"Everything that starts has an end," the 37-year-old Lewis said. "For me, today, I told my team that this will be my last ride."

Lewis will walk away from the game because he wants to spend more time with his sons. He intends to see Ray Lewis III perform as a freshman next year for the University of Miami, where the elder Lewis starred before the Ravens selected him in the first round of the 1996 draft. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Last-place QPR stuns Chelsea

Chelsea's recovery under Rafa Benitez was brought to a shuddering halt by the Queens Park Rangers on Wednesday as the Premier League's bottom team won 1-0 in the west London derby.

QPR's first win in the topflight at Stamford Bridge since March 1979 was secured by Shaun Wright-Phillips scoring against his former club.

The end of Chelsea's four-game win streak in one of the biggest shockers so far this season left Benitez's side fourth in the standings.

Everton is only two points behind after beating Newcastle 2-1, but has played a game more than both Chelsea and sixth-place Arsenal.

Liverpool still has its sights on the top four, beating Sunderland 3-0 to move seven points behind Chelsea but having played one more match. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tennis. Tomic upsets Djokovic Down Under

Bernard Tomic defeated top-ranked Novak Djokovic 6-4, 6-4 to earn the best win of his career, but Australia lost to Serbia 2-1 at the Hopman Cup on Wednesday.

Ana Ivanovic evened the round-robin tie by overwhelming Australian 16-year-old Ashleigh Barty 6-2, 6-3. Barty made a positive start, but once Ivanovic made the first break to lead 4-2 she took almost total control.

The Serbians then combined to win the mixed doubles 6-4, 6-7 (8), 10-6.

Tomic put Djokovic under pressure right from the start, holding five break points in the opening game. Djokovic survived that threat and held a break point of his own to lead 5-3, but netted a backhand. Tomic then broke serve in the next game with a cross-court forehand winner and served out the set.

He kept up the pressure in the second set, failing to convert a break point to lead 4-3, but won his sixth break point at 5-4, which left him serving for the match, and his first win over Djokovic in four tries.

"I played a very, very good match and I'm just happy after the training the last few months that it's all coming good and the training's paying off," Tomic said.

"Hard work does pay off. I'm still improving, but I feel this today was a very good sign. I've got to continue playing like this."

Bernard Tomic on Wednesday GETTY IMAGES

Playing in front of more than 13,000 in the sold-out Perth Arena, Tomic admitted to feeling nervous at the start.

"Very difficult to play the first few games," he said. "It's very hard playing against a player like Novak and come out relaxed. But I'm happy the way I came out. I was serving really good and the whole match was on my side because my serve was working really well."

Djokovic was generous in defeat and conceded that Tomic deserved his victory. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes

Aries
March 21 - April 20
Today's Mercury-Uranus link warns that what you desire the most is unlikely to be good for you, so maybe you need to think about it again. Try to think through what the consequences might be — it could save you a lot of bother later on.

Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Focus on the big issues today. Don't let little everyday things distract you. Most people seem to enjoy getting caught up in trivial details. But you're not most people, you're a Taurus. Be different.

Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Whatever else you do over the next 24 hours, you must stay in control of your emotions. If you allow them to get out of hand, you could end up in a place you really don't want to be. Stay calm.

Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You won't be able to hide your thoughts and feelings today. Your face will betray you even when you think you are lying convincingly. You might as well open up and let the world know what's in your heart.

Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
You may be inclined to work harder than ever but it really isn't necessary. Ask yourself, honestly, if there is anything that must be done immediately. Chances are most things can wait a few days.

Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Although you are feeling pretty dynamic at the moment, you may find it hard to get moving today. Don't let it worry you if nothing much gets done because you will more than make up for it later on.

Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Stop wasting time and energy thinking about what might have been and start thinking about what still could be if you get your act together right now. The past is over and done with, so focus on the future.

Scorpio
Oct. 2 04 - Nov. 22
If you don't follow the rules today, you could find yourself in a lot of trouble. Be wary of people who try to encourage you to take the kind of risks that even you tend to avoid. They'll lead you astray.

Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You may be a nice guy by nature but you will fight for what you believe and you are certainly no pushover. Who was it who said, "Speak softly and carry a big stick"? That's the kind of outlook you need.

Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You may be inclined to throw yourself at each and every challenge that comes your way but that's just a waste of time and energy. Choose your battles carefully and aim to win them one at a time.

Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Rivals and competitors seem determined to give you a hard time but that's OK. You are at your best when it seems as if the world is against you. It's not true, of course, but it does tend to motivate you.

Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
It may seems as if your life is heading down a predestined course but that isn't strictly true. You can change your destiny any time you choose, but first you need to believe that it's possible. Start believing today. SALLY BROMPTON
